When studying the Gospels, we often lose sight of Jesus' acts of compassion. For some reason, they seem to be overlooked by His teachings and miracles. However, when we see the compassionate Christ in action, they present an occasion for us to observe and learn from His examples.

Someone has defined compassion as “your pain in my heart.”<sup>(1)</sup> In our current study of Luke's Gospel, Chapter 7:1-17, we find Jesus' heart moved by the pain that two individuals were experiencing. The first is a Roman centurion who is concerned about his sick servant. The other is a grieving widow whose son has just died. Although both accounts record miraculous outcomes, they become overshadowed by Jesus' acts of compassion. In these two vignettes, we see Jesus more than a teacher and healer. Instead, we see Christ who vicariously experiences the feelings, thoughts and sorrows of others.

“<sup>15</sup> For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but one who in every respect has been tempted as we are, yet without sin. <sup>16</sup> Let us then with confidence draw near to the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy and find grace to help in time of need.” (Hebrews 4:15-16) ESV
